From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

David Rolfe Graeber (/ˈgreɪbər/; February 12, 1961 – September 2, 2020) was an American anthropologist and anarchist activist. His influential work in economic anthropology, particularly his books Debt: The First 5,000 Years (2011), Bullshit Jobs (2018), and The Dawn of Everything (2021), and his leading role in the Occupy movement, earned him recognition as one of the foremost anthropologists and left-wing thinkers of his time. [1][2][3]

Born in New York to a working-class Jewish family, Graeber studied at Purchase College and the University of Chicago, where he conducted ethnographic research in Madagascar under Marshall Sahlins and obtained his doctorate in 1996. He was an assistant professor at Yale University from 1998 to 2005, when the university controversially decided not to renew his contract before he was eligible for tenure. Unable to secure another position in the United States, he entered an "academic exile" in England, where he was a lecturer and reader at Goldsmiths' College from 2008 to 2013, and a professor at the London School of Economics from 2013.

In his early scholarship, Graeber specialized in theories of value (Toward an Anthropological Theory of Value, 2002), social hierarchy and political power (Fragments of an Anarchist Anthropology, 2004, Possibilities, 2007, On Kings, 2017), and the ethnography of Madagascar (Lost People, 2007). In the 2010s he turned to historical anthropology, producing his best-known book, Debt: The First 5000 Years (2011), an exploration of the historical relationship between debt and social institutions, as well as a series of essays on the origins of social inequality in prehistory. In parallel, he developed critiques of bureaucratism and managerialism in

Dear REN Board,

Thank you for considering me as a potential speaker for your forthcoming International Conference on Renewable Energy. I am truly honored by your interest.

As a policy, I only accept invitations to conferences where I receive remuneration for my contribution, in addition to coverage for travel and other expenses. I would appreciate it if you could clarify whether this is included in your invitation.

I look forward to your response and further discussions about my possible participation in your esteemed event.

Best regards,

Dr. XXX

Dear REN Board,

I am grateful for your invitation to speak at the forthcoming International Conference on Renewable Energy. Your event, indeed, seems to align well with my area of expertise.

I appreciate your generous offer of providing two nights of accommodation. As a policy, in addition to accommodation, I typically receive remuneration for my participation, along with coverage for travel and incidental expenses. Could you please confirm whether these aspects are covered within your invitation?

Thank you for your time and consideration. I look forward to your response.

Best regards,

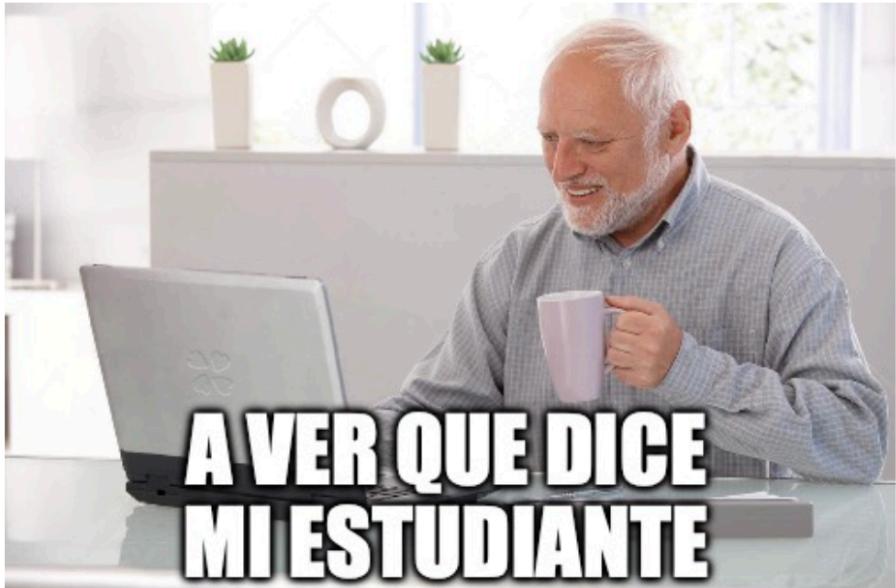

Dr. XXX
